CONTRACT IS BARED

Accused Denies Pact Related To War Craft, But Not Others

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—A sworn statement by Anthony H. G. Fokker, airplane manufacturer, detailing an alleged agreement entered into with Elliott Roosevelt, son of the President, looking to the sale of military airplanes to Russia, was made public last night by Senator Gerald P. Nye, chairman of the Senate Munitions Investigating Committee.

The agreement, dated February 28, 1934, according to the affidavit, "covered the expected sale of 50 military airplanes of Lockheed make to Russia at an expected price to allow a commission of $500,000 to himself and $500,000 to Elliott Roosevelt."

In Oklahoma City, Elliott Roosevelt denied he had made a contract with Fokker to sell military planes. His agreement, he said, referred to non-military craft and he could not deal with Governments directly or indirectly.

In his affidavit, Fokker ascribed the large commissions to his feeling "that the prices which it was proposed to charge the Russians were 'notably excessive'" and said he "had been persuaded by Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Roosevelt's associate, Mr. Stratton, that Mr. Roosevelt had enough influence with the Import and Export Bank and the Russian Purchasing Commission, then in the country, to swing the deal at that excessive price."

At that time, it was pointed out, negotiations looking to settlement of the Russian war debt were expected to result in considerable purchase of American products by the recently recognized Soviet Russian Government.

Before relating how the deal fell through because of the high price asked, the sworn statement brought President Roosevelt's name into the narrative.

"When in the course of taking the deposition, Mr. Carter Tiffany (of New York City), in Mr. Fokker's presence, stated that Mr. H. A. Reed had reported to Mr. Tiffany that before the contract was signed with Mr. Fokker, Mr. Elliott Roosevelt had telephoned the President of the United States from California concerning the arrangement to travel abroad as Mr. Fokker's agent, and gave the President the main details of his proposed contract with Mr. Fokker and had been told by the President that he had objection to Mr. Elliott Roosevelt's traveling abroad in this connection, but had approved the contract with Mr. Fokker."

The deposition quoted Tiffany, in correspondence with Fokker, as saying, "I feel that Elliott, Stratton and Reed have done nothing but chisel in on your affairs under 'pretenses.'" Tiffany was shown to have complained to Stratton, who was not fully identified in the Munitions Committee's release, that "he did not like the contract," and was quoted as saying Stratton had informed him that "he had better go through with the contract and that they had had contracts with other people who had also not liked those contracts, but had gone through with them after Mr. Stratton had turned on the heat."

Fokker, it added, "stated his satisfaction with Mr. Tiffany's method of concluding the contract in the way he did, involving a cash payment of $5000 for Mr. Roosevelt, and the payment of a further check of $6566 through a BURGOS, Oct. 7.—(INS)—I seldom get back to Burgos these days. Never have travelled so much on an assignment. I figure now that my total mileage from the beginning of the war to date is over 4,000. Our courier car, which travelled every day from Burgos to the French frontier town of Saint Jean Pied de Port and back covered in the first two months of the war nearly the distance around the world.

The distance is 200 miles to the frontier, or 400 for the round trip, and sixty trips on sixty days makes 24,000 miles, which is quite a number of miles. It takes a round ten hours for the round trip, because although we can cruise at seventy miles an hour for the last three hours out of Burgos the last part of the trip, only one-fifth of it in miles, takes two more hours. It is over the Pyrenees, on the most winding trail it has ever been my misfortune to encounter. The driver has developed a perceptible increase in his arm muscles from pulling the car around something over 100 sharp bends twice a day.

Most of the time, too, this mountain road is shrouded in mist. Sometimes though it is clear and we get a beautiful view.

Those remote valleys are peace itself, and the war seems very far away until a band of young Requetes steps out of the woods, hails us and demands our pass.

Just now we ran out of gasoline for the very first time. Old "Chadders," our expert driver and diplomat plenipotentiary for police matters, had never let the gas run out before. He usually carries a full supply for the round trip in extra cans. Deeply chagrined he took a couple of cans and started out to find a garage. It was about dusk and the rest of us waited by the road-side.

Three groups of local maidens came down the road singing patriotic songs of the Requetes and the Phalangists. They swung along in squads of four to six. We waited for them to get right up to us then lifted our hands and shouted fiercely "Viva Espana!" They all shouted back "Viva Espana!" and went off staggering with laughter. Pretty soon they came back again and before Chadders returned with the gas they had repeated the performance a dozen times. Not so much excitement in this part of Spain for years.

But it got dark and we hunted up a farmhouse where they took us into the kitchen and gave us a glass of dark

Wage War On Dogs Which Are Destroying Poultry

The state game agent, co-operating with the local game protector, Daniel Potter, Newportville, is making nightly tours in an endeavor to prevent dogs running at large.

The tours are the result of complaints of dogs destroying livestock and poultry. The tours will continue, it is stated, until the menace ceases. Several dogs were killed last night.

Dogs found with collars and tags will have their owners thus traced, and the owners will be fined.

SECRETS OF RESETTLEMENT

Colonists Taught that Work Is a False Ideal
No. 3

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—Study courses thrust upon Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell's resettlement beneficiaries disclose conclusive proof of the administration program for altering America.

Non-relief workers must sweat to pay the taxes which make RA possible. Yet in these study courses the rehabilitants and colonists, who receive the cash, learn that work is a false ideal. They learn it is better to be a Tugwell co-operator than a private employee, because employees are exploited. They learn capitalism is doomed and that when co-operators take over the government no one need work more than two hours a day.

A mimeographed pamphlet, "What Is a Co-operative Study Club?" impresses upon colonists they are part of a "co-operative community so we will need to know more about co-operation."

Main Thing Is To Start

"Therefore," the pamphlet continues, "we should get together in small groups and discuss what co-operation is. . . . Until they (leaders) are developed, people who have had successful experience in co-operatives will help to start the program, but the main thing is to start. . . . Thinking in terms of our own Resettlement communities, it is our hope that interest will develop in the co-operative movement. . . . We are establishing co-operative enterprises to produce food and clothing for our people. We are establishing a trade center. . . ."

Another pamphlet, "Women's Place in the Co-operative Movement," makes plain the colonists should patronize this trade center instead of private merchants, the theory being that when one buys capitalistic merchandise the necessity of profit makes the price more than the thing is worth.

A Quiet Revolution

"Why pay more for something than it is worth?" the booklet states. "If your co-operative store does not afford these services (food, clothing, furniture, curtains, draperies, varnish) arrange for it."

From here, "Lesson One—What Is Consumer's Co-operation?" is the next step. The regimented students are told that the program is "one of the quietest and most successful revolutions in history." It is described as an exciting pastime of "beating the merchant at his own game."

Then the people are led through the writings of James Peter Warbasse, head of the Co-operative League of the United States of America, who has been one of Dr. Tugwell's advisers, and into other similar documents.

European System Advocated

"A subject for a given discussion at the club meeting will be previously announced," says one of Dr. Tugwell's messages. "Reading matter will be distributed. . . . The leader will hear briefly from each."

From "A Trip to Co-operative Europe," by Howard Cowden, head of the North Kansas City, Mo., Co-operative Association, and Resettlement's chief consultant, they are told that co-operatives are displacing European business by out-competing it in manufacture, merchandising and marketing. This book is "recommended" on page 3 of Dr. Tugwell's "What Is a Co-operative Study Club?"

JURY RETURNS VERDICT
IN FAVOR OF DEFENDANTS

Dean Robert R. Wicks Is Awarded $2000, and Mrs.
Wicks Is Given $1500

OTHER SUITS PENDING

DOYLESTOWN, Oct. 7.—A jury in the Bucks county civil court at seven o'clock Monday night returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiffs, Robert R. Wicks, dean of the Chapel of Princeton University, and his wife, Mrs. Elinor MacMaster Wicks, in a suit for damages against Norman Haboush and Edward J. Haboush, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Princeton University dean and his wife were injured in an automobile accident on the Lincoln Highway on February 3rd of this year.

After three days of trial before a jury and Judge Calvin S. Boyer, the jury returned a verdict for $2000 in favor of Dean Wicks and a verdict for $1500 in favor of Mrs. Wicks. Suit was brought to recover $20,000, the amount mentioned in the statement of claim filed in the office of the Bucks county Prothonotary.

Testimony was brought out that Mrs. Wicks suffered from a broken back and other injuries. Dean Wicks was also painfully injured.

Other suits growing out of the same accident are pending in other courts. The jury deliberated less than two hours in reaching the verdict.

State To Hold Clinic

and Mrs. Bell

A PLEASANT EVENING

The Social Circle of the First Baptist Church held its first meeting of the season last evening in the Sunday School room of the church, with 54 in attendance. A business meeting was held. Small banks in the form of churches had been distributed to the members at their last meeting. Those were returned last evening and a neat sum realized.

After the meeting, a shower was tendered two recent brides, Mrs. Charles Thompson and Mrs. Melvin Bell. An arch decorated with a bridal wreath, flowers and a silver bell, had the inscription "Gate to Happiness." Mannequins dressed in raincoats and rubber boots, holding open umbrellas, were on each side of the gate-way. Ribbon streamers fell from the umbrellas, to which were attached gifts. A few gifts were wrapped in fancy paper representing stones, and these gifts were placed as stepping stones to the arch.

Mrs. Thompson and Mrs. Bell received many presents. Each received a candlewick spread, a gift from the Social Circle. Refreshments were served.

Dwight Opydyke Takes As

KNOX, ON FLYING TRIP TO BURLINGTON, LAMBASTS UNNATURAL WORKINGS OF
NEW DEAL; HUNDREDS AT R. R. STATION

One of Biggest Demonstrations Ever Staged in New Jersey in Recent Years is Accorded Candidate for Vice-Presidency of United States—Notables of Section Are Present

(By STAFF CORRESPONDENT)

BURLINGTON, N. J., Oct. 7.—Hundreds of enthusiastic supporters jammed the Burlington railroad station this morning to hear Col. Frank Knox, Republican candidate for Vice-President, lambast and shatter the unnatural workings of the New Deal when this distinguished Republican standard-bearer stopped here from 11.10 to 11.25 and addressed the huge assemblage from the rear car of his train, enroute to Atlantic City from Trenton.

Believed by local leaders to be one of the biggest demonstrations staged here in years, Col. Knox wasted no time in striking at the fallacies of the New Deal and the present Administration.

Many local notables and Republican leaders in Burlington county and surrounding towns and cities were on hand to hear Col. Knox say, "This is more than just a campaign of political parties—this is a campaign for the preservation of our sane and sound political institutions that we have followed for scores of years. This is a campaign to rout the bureaucrats that now tell us how we must live and act."

Warning the assemblage against continuation of the New Deal experimenter, Knox declared that unless the Nation returns "to ancient principles of fair and sane and honest and impartial government," by the election of the Republican ticket, "we shall end in disaster, or have the trouble that some European countries are now having."

Striking at the waste in the handling of relief in the present Administration this honored publisher said, "We of the Republican party are not adverse to relief, but we do not want the waste in its distribution that now prevails. The New Dealers are merely using our tax money to build up more powerful political machines while you and I foot the bill."

Illustrating the extreme wastefulness of the Democrats Col. Knox cited two cases that he has come across in his campaign tour from coast to coast. He cited the illustration of an appropriation of several millions dollars to the State of Maine for the prevention of malaria and the malaria carrying mosquito, pointing out that no case of malaria has been reported in Maine in the last 140 years!

The vice presidential candidate on the Republican ticket also mentioned an appropriation made to the state of California for the erection of a beautiful lily pond. Commenting on this waste of some $14,000 the speaker said, "lily ponds are nice, yes, they are beautiful, but there are people in California and all over the Union who are still unemployed."

Speaking of unemployment in the country Knox pointed out that in 1932 there were about 12,000,000 persons unemployed. Commenting on this situation Knox said, "The only way to bring people back to their jobs is through private industry and not with this government interference that has ruined the economic prosperity of the country."

Knox called to the attention of the crowd the promises of the Democratic party in 1932. "If those promises had been faithfully kept," Knox pointed out, "we would have been well on our way to a lasting recovery. But for some unknown reason every one of those promises was broken within 60 days and what happened since is evident to all of you—eight out of 19 measures passed by the Administration have been declared unconstitutional."

A scathing denunciation of WPA was made by Knox who characterized it as "a grand political scheme for the advancement of the New Dealers, without regard to its good and benefits."

"With a sane, sound and sensible administration we will regain our lost prosperity. There are 20 billions of dollars worth of orders to be filled by private industry in this country—when the business men of the nation have been convinced that the government is safe. They are as yet afraid to risk expansion—afraid that they will wake up the following morning and discover that the government has invented some new crazy scheme to ruin their businesses."

"And with a typical American, Alf M. Landon, in the White House we will go forward. Relief will continue, but the waste will be eliminated. And the bureaucratic control will be broken," the Republican candidate claimed.

Bringing his speech down to the problems of the city of Burlington, Knox said, "Your city was founded years ago by people who wanted economic freedom and an equal opportunity to live and work under a set of fair and honest laws. The state of New Jersey was founded so that people could find politically equality and live in security. And I know some of the problems of your State now. I lived here once, serving as an officer in the training camp at Camp Dix."

"It was these two ideas that made America—politically free and equality of economic opportunity—and the only way to save the country is to rout the New Dealers and continue in the American way."

Preceding the speech the Col. Franklin D'Olier Legion Band of Burlington played for the audience and paraded through the streets of the town.

Col. Knox was introduced by Senator John C. Barbour, New Jersey. Mrs. Knox, dressed in a dark blue suit was also introduced to the crowd. Her pleasing appearance won an enormous round of applause from the assembly.

Several prominent Republican officials appeared on the rear platform of the train with Col. Knox when he made his address.

WATCH YOUR FIRE

This is Fire Prevention Week in America. Its purpose is implied in its title. Its propriety is better understood in the light of the fact that fire losses now run to half a billion dollars in property and 15,000 units in human life.

Americans who delight in the superlative will find it in the fire statistics. The per capita fire loss in the United States is seven times that of Great Britain, 10 times that of France and 50 times that of Holland. Americans again lead, if that is any satisfaction to misguided patriots.

Why must the United States suffer so much more than the other nations cited? The explanation lies somewhere among such cases as careless smokers, defective chimneys, faulty building construction and general carelessness. America has been profligate with its forests, its waterpower, its wild flowers and many other natural resources. These bad habits probably extend themselves readily to disregard fire hazards.

This indifference is not creditable to a country that prides itself on its efficiency. It is uneconomic and above all 15,000 lives in human toll show that it is tragic. Be careful of fires.

COAST GUARD RESPONSIBILITY

A carpenter on a British freighter in the Caribbean was found suffering from a condition which called for an operation without delay. Through the combined efforts of the United States Health Service and the Coast Guard, a cutter sped to the scene, took the sick man aboard and rushed him to San Juan, Puerto Rico, in time to save his life.

It happened that on the same day Crooner Harry Richman, was still stuck with his plane in a Newfoundland bog and wondering why our Navy didn't rally to his aid. "They have lots of ships," complained the crooner. "Why don't they send one around and pull us out?"

It was a question whether the Richman flight was inspired by sheer love of flying or a yearning for public notice. However, the brassiness that is the stock in trade of a night club celebrity did not desert Mr. Richman on a Canadian marsh. He understood the Navy was maintained to provide 24-hour road service, but now stands corrected.

Perhaps it he tries again and manages to fall into the Atlantic, our fleet will hustle to his side—not with any great enthusiasm, but out of a sense of duty growing from the immemorial law that an emergency at sea knows no nationality. But it will have to be a genuine emergency. If Harry is walking about on solid ground, he will have to find his way home as best he can.

Plans have been completed for the annual harvest home supper which will be held in the social room of Tullytown M. E. Church, Wednesday from five to eight p. m. A chicken menu has been prepared. The Ladies' Aid is sponsoring the affair.

On Friday evening, a number of friends and classmates of Charles Tyrell, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Tyrell, gathered at his home in honor of his 11th birthday. The young folks played many games. Refreshments were served. Charles received many gifts. Those present were: Betty Bachofer, Jean Burton, Julia Spangler, Doris Nelson, Clara Lavenberg, Lillian Hirst, Christine Johnson, Viola Schaffer, Virginia Tyrell, Dorothy Tyrell, Flora Tyrell, Charles Carlen, Albert Monti, John Zuckero, Joseph Napoli, and William Tyrell, Jr.

EDGELY

Friends and relatives tendered Andrew Fire a surprise birthday party Sunday evening in Dick's Hall. The evening was spent in playing games and dancing. A three-piece orchestra supplied the music. Guests were from Bristol, Burlington, New York, Philadelphia, Trenton, Allentown, Tullytown and Edgely. Refreshments were served. Mr. Fire received a number of gifts.

Guests of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Carroll over the week-end were Mr. and Mrs. Harry McGrath, Langhorne; and Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Haber, Holmesburg.

Mr. and Mrs. William Southrey and family, Philadelphia, were week-end guests of Arthur Wolvin, Sr.

POCKETBOOK FACTS ABOUT YOUR TAXES

Roosevelt Jumps Debt 60%

The debt of the Federal Government, forming a mortgage on future incomes of taxpayers, has increased more than 60 percent under the Roosevelt administration. It is about 30 percent greater than at the war peak and more than double the lowest amount of the post-war period. The debt will continue to mount under existing budget policies.

To the present Federal debt total of more than thirty-three and one-half billions, must be added the debts of State and local governments, totaling about twenty billions, the latter being a 100 percent increase since 1922. The grand total of public debt of more than fifty-three and one-half billions is more than the estimated national income in 1935.

Only a new administration in Washington can reverse the high geared spending program.

"THE BIG FOUR" by Agatha Christie

CHAPTER XIX

"Yes," said Poirot, nodding his head. "There is Gerald Paynter, as you say. He is his uncle's heir. He was dining out that night, though."

"He might have got at some of the ingredients of the curry," I suggested. "And he would take care to be out, so as not to have to partake of the dish."

I think my reasoning rather impressed Poirot. He looked at me with a more respectful attention than he had given me so far.

"He returns late," I mused, pursuing a hypothetical case. "Sees the light in his study, enters, and, finding his plan has failed, thrusts the old man down into the fire."

"Mr. Paynter, who was a fairly hearty man of fifty-five, would not permit himself to be burnt to death without a struggle, Hastings. Such a reconstruction is not feasible."

"Well, Poirot," I cried, "we're nearly there, I fancy. Let us hear what you think?"

Poirot threw me a smile, swelled out his chest, and began in a pompous manner.

"Assuming murder, the question at once arises, why choose that particular method? I can think of only one reason—to confuse identity, the face being charred beyond recognition."

"What?" I cried. "You think—"

"A moment's patience, Hastings. I was going on to say that I examine that theory. Is there any ground for believing that the body is not that of Mr. Paynter? Is there any one else whose body it possibly could be? I examine these two questions and finally I answer them both in the negative."

"Oh!" I said, rather disappointed. "And then?"

Poirot's eyes twinkled a little. "And then I say to myself, 'Since there is here something that I do not understand, it would be well that I should investigate the matter. I must not permit myself to be wholly engrossed by the Big Four. Ah! we are just arriving. My little clothes brush, where does it hide itself? Here it is—brush me down, I pray you, my friend, and then I will perform the same service for you.'"

"Yes," said Poirot thoughtfully, as he put away the brush. "One must not permit oneself to be obsessed by one idea. I have been in danger of that. Figure to yourself, my friend, that even here, in this case, I am in danger of it. Those two lines you mentioned, a down-stroke and a line at right angles to it, what are they but the beginning of a '4'?"

"Good gracious, Poirot," I cried, laughing. "Is it not absurd? I see the hand of the Big Four everywhere. It is well to employ one's wits in a totally different milieu. Ah! there is Japp come to meet us."

The Scotland Yard Inspector was, indeed, waiting on the platform, and greeted us warmly.

"Well, Moosier Poirot, this is good. Thought you'd like to be let in on this. Tip-top mystery, isn't it?"

I read this aright as showing Japp to be completely puzzled and hoping to pick up a pointer from Poirot.

Japp had a car waiting, and we drove up in it to Croftlands. It was a square, white house, quite unpretentious, and covered with creepers, including the stately yellow jasmine. Japp looked up at it as we did.

"Must have been balmy to go writing that, poor old cove," he remarked. "Hallucinations, perhaps, and thought he was outside."

Poirot was smiling at him. "Which was it, my good Japp?" he asked. "Accident or murder?"

The Inspector seemed a little embarrassed by the question. "Well, if it weren't for that curry business, I'd be for accident everytime. There's no sense in holding a live man's head in the fire—why, he'd scream the house down."

"Ah!" said Poirot in a low voice. "Fool that I have been. Triple imbecile! You are a cleverer man than I am, Japp."

Japp was rather taken aback by the compliment—Poirot being usually given to exclusive self-praise. He reddened and muttered something about there being a lot of doubt about that.

He led the way through the house to the room where the tragedy had occurred—Mr. Paynter's study. It was a wide, low room, with book-lined walls and big leather armchairs.

Poirot looked across at once to the window which gave upon a gravelled terrace.

"The window, it was unlatched?" he asked.

"That's the whole point, of course. When the doctor left this room, he merely closed the door behind him. The next morning it was found locked. Who locked it? Mr. Paynter? Ah! Ling declares that the window was closed and bolted. Dr. Quentin, on the other hand, has an impression that it was closed, but not fastened, but he won't swear either way. If he could, it would make a great difference. If the man was murdered, some one entered the room either through the door or the window—if through the door, it was an inside job; if through the window, it might have been any one. First thing when they had broken the door down, they flung the window open, and the housemaid who did it thinks that it wasn't fastened, but she's a precious bad witness—will remember anything you ask her to!"

"What about the key?"

"There you are again. It was on the floor among the wreckage of the door. Might have fallen from the keyhole, might have been dropped there by one of the people who entered, might have been slipped underneath the door from the outside."

"In fact everything is 'might have been'?"

"You've hit it, Moosier Poirot. That's just what it is."

Poirot was leaning round him, frowning unhappily.

"I cannot see light," he murmured. "Just now—yes, I got a gleam, but now all is darkness once more. I have not the clue—the motive."

"Young Gerald Paynter had a pretty good motive," remarked Japp grimly. "He's been wild enough in his time, I can tell you. And extravagant. You know what artists are, too—no morals at all."

Poirot did not pay much attention to Japp's sweeping strictures on the artistic temperament. Instead he smiled knowingly.

"My good Japp, is it possible that you throw the mud in my eyes? I know well enough that it is the Chinaman you suspect. But you are so ardent. You want me to help you—and yet you drag the red kipper across the trail."

Japp burst out laughing. "That's you all over, Mr. Poirot. Yes, I'd bet on the Chin, I'll admit it now. It stands to reason that it was he who doctored the curry, and if he'd try once in an evening to get his master out of the way, he'd try twice."

"I wonder if he would," said Poirot softly.

"But it's the motive that beats me. Some heathen revenge of other, I suppose."

"I wonder," said Poirot again. "There has been no robbery? Nothing has disappeared? No jewelry, or money, or papers?"

"No—that is, not exactly."

I picked up my ears; so did Poirot.

"The's been no robbery, I mean," explained Japp. "But the old boy was writing a book of some-sort. We only knew about it this morning when there was a letter from the publishers asking about the manuscript. It was just completed, it seems. Young Paynter and I have searched high and low, but can't find a trace of it—he must have hidden it away somewhere."

Poirot's eyes were shining with the green light I knew so well.

"How was it called, this book?" he asked.

"The Hidden Hand in China, I think it was called."

"Aha!" said Poirot, with almost a gasp. Then he said quickly, "Let me see the Chinaman, Ah Ling."

The Chinaman was sent for and appeared, shuffling along, with his eyes cast down, and his pigtail swinging. His impassive face showed no trace of any kind of emotion.

"Ah Ling," said Poirot, "are you sorry your master is dead?"

"I welly sorry. He good master."

"You know who kill him?"

"I not know. I tell plecceman if I know."

The questions and answers went on. With the same impassive face, Ah Ling described how he had made the curry. The cook had had nothing to do with it, he declared, no hand had touched it but his own. I wondered if he saw where his admission was leading him. He stuck to it too, that the window to the garden was bolted that evening. If it was open in the morning, his master must have opened it himself.

At last Poirot dismissed him. "That will do, Ah Ling." Just as the Chinaman had got to the door, Poirot recalled him. "And you know nothing, you say, of the Yellow Jasmine?"

"No, what should I know?"

"Nor yet of the sign that was written underneath it?"

Poirot leant forward as he spoke, and quickly traced something on the dust of a little table. I was near enough to see it before he rubbed it out. A down stroke, a line at right angles, and then a second line down which completed a big 4. The effect on the Chinaman was electrical.

For one moment his face was a mask of terror. Then, as suddenly, it was impassive again, and repeating his grave disclaimer, he withdrew.

Japp departed in search of young Paynter, and Poirot and I were left alone together.

"The Big Four, Hastings," cried Poirot. "Once again, the Big Four. Paynter was a great traveller. In his book there was doubtless some vital information concerning the doings of Number One, Li Chang Yen, the head and brains of the Big Four."

"But who—how—"

"Hush, here they come."

Gerald Paynter was an amiable, rather weak-looking young man. He had a soft brown beard, and a peculiar flowing tie. He answered Poirot's questions readily enough.

"I dined out with some neighbours of ours, the Wycherlys," he explained. "What time did I get home? Oh, about eleven. I had a latch-key, you know. All the servants had gone to bed, and I naturally thought my uncle had done the same. As a matter of fact, I did think I caught sight of that soft-footed Chinese beggar Ah Ling just whisking round the corner of the hall, but I fancy I was mistaken."

"When did you last see your uncle, Mr. Paynter? I mean before you came to live with him."

"Oh! not since I was a kid of ten. He and his brother (my father) quarrelled, you know."

"But he found you again with very little trouble, did he not? In spite of all the years that had passed?"

"Yes, it was quite a bit of luck my seeing the lawyer's advertisement."

Poirot asked no more questions. (To Be Continued)

WEYERHAEUSER ANNOUNCES A SIMPLE FINANCING PLAN FOR BUILDING YOUR OWN HOME!

THERE was the time when building a home was a colossal adventure for the family of average income. But today, the average family can experience that glorious feeling of living in a new home—free from financial worries that formerly took the fun out of it. No longer need people skimp and scrimp for the privilege of owning a beautiful home.

—A new, simple, and more equitable plan for financing homes has been devised. Today, you can build on a basis that permits you to enjoy your home while paying for it. Simple monthly payments are all you ever make after the first small installment. The small amount you pay is the same each month—and it covers everything. It pays off the loan as well as all charges for interest, taxes and insurance. Stop in and talk over the plan.

$40.00 MONTHLY BUYS THIS HOME

This house is an example of what we mean by a new and better finance plan. $40.00 a month buys it for you—pays off the loan and handles interest, taxes and insurance.

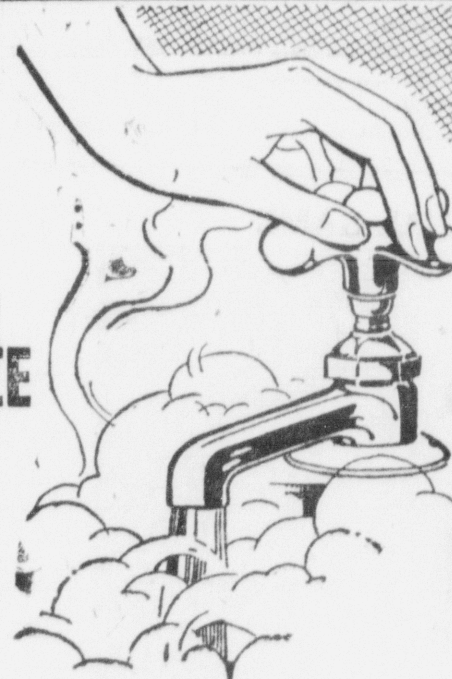

We have several other beautiful designs—larger and smaller houses to suit your particular needs. If you prefer, you can build from your own plan. Arrangements can be made with any reliable contractor.

THE SIMPLE MONTHLY PAYMENT PLAN

Terms as long as 19½ years—with simple monthly payments. Loans up to $16,000. Nominal down payments. A single, insured mortgage which never requires refinancing. Repair and remodeling money also available for owners of existing property in amounts up to $2,500. Three years to pay. No down payment.

TEN BOUTS PROMISED BOXING FANS TONIGHT

The Daggert Boxing Club will sponsor another interesting boxing show tonight in the Croydon Arena, State Road and Cedar Avenue. Ten bouts which promise to hold the fans on edge throughout the evening have been booked by match-maker Mickey Giordano with the first going on at 8.30 o'clock sharp. The bouts are sanctioned by the Middle Atlantic district of the A. A. U.

All bouts appear to be the real rock 'em and sock 'em affairs and it will not be surprising to see several end in kayoes. Giordano has also seen to it that most of the boys on the card can absorb plenty of punishment before giving in and dropping to the canvas.

Two return bouts have been re-matched. Johnny Litto, sensational 126 pounder, will meet Billy Crawford, promising Daggert fighter who is heading for the 1936 championship. Crawford and Litto fought a bang-up bout last week with both boys getting in enough blows for the average fighter to go down. Litto was given the decision but it was very close. In the other return match, Billy Blade will swing them with William Bondah. This bout had the fans in an uproar last week and from all indications it will be a repetition of nothing but punching with very little boxing science mixed in.

Through the co-operation of Charlie Daggert, Giordano has also arranged for the return to the ring by Harry Devlin, present A. A. U. 135 lb. champion. Devlin has been resting because of illness and will stage his comeback in the local arena, fighting Harry Bond, Arena.

Joie Lombardo, Daggert, and Frankie Lamont, East Side, are also on the card. Lamont meets Oscar Mackey, Germantown, and Lombardo fights Joe Lamb, also of the Germantown Boys' Club. Benny Belinski who kayoed Carl Lang, Holland, last week, is back again with a tough opponent in Art Hosefras, Germantown.

Giordano also expects to sign bouts for Johnny Ferrara, Frank Donofrio, Harry Graver, and Johnny Morgan.

There will be a slight increase in the admission prices, effective tonight.

CHIEF ELKINS, CARLISLE, SIGNS WITH TORNADOES

The Bristol Tornadoes will stage their third game of the season on Landreth Field in Bristol, Sunday, when they line up against the powerful Frankford Trojans, for years considered one of the best professional clubs in Frankford.

A number of changes have been made by Coach Dougherty, due to the ragged playing in their last game against Roebeling Blue Centers. Chief Elkins, one of the greatest Indian players in the country. The latter was an all-American while at Carlisle and has played professional football with the famous New York Giants of the National Professional League.

The team is gradually getting into shape and in its last game against Seymour in Philadelphia showed real form.

Besides Elkins, other new faces to be found on the club are John Sykes, the former great end from Villanova, who showed up well with the Tornadoes against Roebeling; and Larry Sheppard, the big 225-lb centre from Bucknell.

The Bristol club has secured the services of Dr. Jules Sobel from Bristol to act as team physician, as a number of minor injuries have caused considerable delay during the game.

While the crowd at the Roebeling game was not as big as expected by the management, due to the World Series game, a record-breaking crowd is expected to turn out this Sunday, providing the weather continues to be good.

Seating arrangements have been completed and close to 2000 fans can be taken care of. The game is scheduled to get under way about 2.30.

Franco Announces Offensive

Burgos, Spain, Oct. 7.—General Francisco Franco today announced plans for a general offensive against Madrid from Toledo and Guadarrama, over the week-end.

White House Silent On Investigation

Washington, Oct. 7.—The White House was silent today over investigations of the Nye Senate Munitions Committee, linking Elliott Roosevelt, a son of the President, and Anthony R. Fokker, a former German airplane builder, in an alleged agreement to sell airplanes to Russia.

Fokker's affidavit claimed the pair entered into the agreement in 1934 at a price which would net each a commission of $500,000. The price asked was so high, Fokker stated, the deal fell through.

Fokker made a second agreement with the President's son on February 28th, 1934, when, he said, young Roosevelt held the executive sales agency for Douglas planes to Russia. He said he first met Roosevelt in the Douglas company's plant, and "Roosevelt would swing the Russia business." The German's affidavit showed the alleged agreement was made at the time American manufacturers held high hopes for a rally in Russian trade, following President Roosevelt's declaration of recognition of the Soviets.

brokerage house, which it was difficult for Mr. Elliott Roosevelt to accept in view of the President's disputes with Wall Street at the time. The latter check went unclaimed and payment finally was stopped on it, according to the deposition.

The Fokker deposition was released unexpectedly from Senator Nye's office, presumably under orders sent by the munitions investigation chairman from New York. No explanation of the decision to release the document accompanied it and efforts to reach members or employees of the committee who could speak authoritatively about the identity and present connections of the persons named proved futile.

It was recalled, however, that Frank

A great many of the men in this northern part of Spain and especially in the Basque country have been to America as sheep herders. I met one old fellow in Saint Jean Pied De Port who could not speak a word of French, but only Basque and very fair American.

He had been in America twenty-four years. He was fifty-two, had just come back to his Basque country three years ago and married, on $5,000 he had saved on the sheep plains of Montana. He sold us some sweet corn.

FRANK, YALE. HAUZE, PENN.

A potentially great University of Pennsylvania team travels to New Haven to avenge previous defeats at the hands of the Yale Bulldogs. Clint Frank, elusive Eli halfback, and Henry Wright, stellar tackle, will greet them with open arms. Jim Hauze, Penn's center bulwark, and Ed Warwick of the senior backfield are the sparkplugs of the Red and Blue attack.

RED ROLFE REACHES THIRD IN THE FINAL GAME

Red Rolfe, New York Yankees' third baseman, is shown sliding safely into third in the sixth and final game of the World Series between the Yanks and the New York Giants. Rolfe had singled, stolen second, took third on Di Maggio's single and went home on Gehrig's sacrifice. Jackson is covering the bag for the Giants.

WHY THE YANKS GOT SEVEN RUNS IN THE NINTH

Substitute Catcher Harry Danning of the New York Giants makes a futile stab at the ball in the beginning of the fatal ninth inning of the last game of the World Series. Di Maggio's hand is outstretched and touching home after a thrilling slide. The ball popped out of Danning's mitt—and the deluge of runs which drowned out the Giants was started.

SECRETS OF RESETTLEMENT

page 3 of the same leaflet for use in the study clubs, tells them co-operation has not done all that it can do until the profit motive does not touch any of the things the people use, and that they can acquire all industries if they organize.

How To Take Over Government

Then, in his "Co-operative Democracy," which is designated for enlightenment of RA clients, on page 17 of RA's "Lesson One—What Is Consumer Co-operation?" it is told how services such as Dr. Tugwell is providing will take over the government.

They will come into control simply by attracting increasing patronage of persons who want to pocket capitalistic profits, and by thus expanding will be able to displace private manufacturing, private retailing, private wholesaling, and will be able to take over the natural resources. Then will be set up a program looking to a two-hour day.

This is indicated to be proper on the ground that capitalistic government is conducted for the benefit of the few, because "the people who own the machinery" which provides jobs and wages in private industry "are animated by the same idea as the slave owner."

Present Likened to Fall of Rome

Under the existing system, it is pointed out, persons again unfortunately are "giving their energy and using their most valuable time each day" in order to produce profits for someone else. The only governmental benefits the people obtain, it is taught, are the result of political expediency on behalf of politicians kowtowing to wealthy overlords.

"Many believe that the masses—the people—rule the state," Mr. Warbasse says. "They do not. It is impossible that people be rulers in a state and servants in industry."

Indeed, the present is likened to the early stages of the fall of the Roman Empire or of the French Revolution.
